
Top stars Mirra Andreeva and Linda Noskova enter the 2027 Porsche Tennis Grand Prix

27/11/2026 The Grand Slam champions Mirra Andreeva and Linda Noskova are the first top stars to enter the 2027 Porsche Tennis Grand Prix. The long-established tournament will take place in Stuttgart's Porsche Arena from 10 to 18 April. Tennis fans will receive a ten per cent discount on selected seats in a special Christmas offer from 1 to 24 December.

For Mirra Andreeva, 2026 marks an important milestone in her still young career. The 19-year-old claimed her first ever Grand Slam title at the French Open to celebrate her biggest sporting success to date. Currently the world No. 2, she additionally won this year's tournaments in Adelaide and Linz and, most recently the WTA Finals, the season-ending tournament for the eight most successful women players. She was the runner-up in Madrid and Beijing. At the Porsche Tennis Grand Prix, she reached the semifinals.

Linda Noskova also secured her first Grand Slam win of her career in 2026. With her triumph at Wimbledon, the 22-year-old Czech claimed the most prestigious title in tennis. This year, the world No. 7 also won the tournament in Berlin and reached the penultimate round at the WTA Finals. She was also a quarterfinalist at the Porsche Tennis Grand Prix.

“With Mirra and Linda in the line-up, two of the past season’s most successful players have entered early for the Porsche Tennis Grand Prix in April. It’s really pleasing and a good indication of just how important our tournament is amongst the players,” says Tournament Director Markus Günthardt. “Our spectators can already look forward to world class tennis in the Porsche Arena. Our aim is to once again present them with an exceptionally strong field of players in 2027.”
