

Record holder Porsche aims for 20th outright win at the 24 Hours of Le Mans

12/06/2024 Porsche is keen to add to its illustrious record at the 24 Hours of Le Mans on June 15 – 16. At the 92nd edition of the world's biggest endurance race, the three Porsche 963 racing cars fielded by the Porsche Penske Motorsport factory team are targeting the marques' 20th outright victory. For each lap completed by the three factory cars, Porsche will donate 750 euros towards the "Racing for Charity" initiative. A total of 23 prototypes from nine different brands, including three customer Porsche 963 from Hertz Team Jota and Proton Competition, will pit themselves against each other in the top Hypercar class. In the new LMGT3 category, 23 vehicles from nine manufacturers will also battle for victory. Porsche is represented in this class by two 911 GT3 R entries from its Manthey partner team.

Atlanta. To increase the chances of clinching its 20th overall win, Porsche Penske Motorsport again fields three Porsche 963 race cars this year. The factory – or "works" – cars can be differentiated by the colors of their mirrors, the Porsche lettering on the windshield and the rear fin. These elements of the two full-season FIA World Endurance Championship (WEC) cars will be painted black (No. 5) and white (No. 6). The No. 4 race car entered with a lineup of fulltime IMSA WeatherTech SportsCar Championship drivers will feature red accents on those areas. Top drivers from the Porsche works squad will crew the 695 HP hybrid prototypes from Weissach, Germany. The odds in the fiercely contested Hypercar class also look promising for the three identical racing cars from the customer teams Hertz Team Jota and Proton Competition.

“There can only be one goal for Porsche at Le Mans – to win. We hold the record number of victories and we're determined to add another triumph to our record. That puts big pressure on everyone involved. We're by no means underestimating our rivals,” says Thomas Laudenbach, outlining the intention of the German sports car manufacturer. The Vice President Porsche Motorsport adds: “The top Hypercar class is extremely competitive with a total of 23 prototypes from nine different manufacturers. That's precisely what motivates us. We want to underline our expertise and technical skills in the world's toughest race. That applies not only to our factory team but also to the strong customer teams with their Porsche 963. We're also looking strong in the LMGT3 category. Manthey's two 911 GT3 R will be well placed to fight for class victory.”

“Our preparations have gone very well at the first races of the year on both sides of the Atlantic as well as at last Sunday's test drives,” explains Urs Kuratle. The Director Factory Motorsport LMDh is excited about the highlight of the FIA WEC season: “It's great to see how the suspense continues to build among everyone in the team. Everyone is working with total concentration. We're united by one big goal: we want to bring home Porsche's 20th overall victory. I'm curious to see how the competition evolves over the next few days.”

“We got off to a great start on the test day for this year's Le Mans race,” states Jonathan Diuguid, in reference to the official pre-test last Sunday. Looking ahead to the race week, the Managing Director Porsche Penske Motorsport adds: “We expect similarly good conditions in practice, qualifying and on both race days. If this happens, then our insights from the test will have been very valuable. We'll then need to focus on making further tweaks to the cars.”

“Racing for Charity”: Porsche donates towards helping ill children

The sports car manufacturer will donate 750 euros for each lap completed by the three works-run Porsche 963 racing vehicles. After the racing highlight of the year, the total amount will be donated to three non-profit organizations that, among other things, support and care for seriously ill children worldwide: Kinderherzen retten e.V., Interplast Germany e.V. and the Ferry Porsche Foundation.

The race

The 24 Hours of Le Mans marks the fourth round on the FIA World Endurance Championship (WEC) calendar and is the highlight of the season. Due to the long distance, double points will be awarded towards the world championship. Porsche tackles the 92nd edition of the world's greatest endurance race leading all world championship standings. The classic event, which was contested for the first time 101 years ago, offers other unique features. For instance, the deployment of three safety cars at once on the track. The reason for this is that each lap of the Circuit des 24 Heures in Le Mans is extremely long at 8.47 miles (13.626 km). This year's race gets underway on Saturday, June 15, at 10:00 a.m. EST (4:00 p.m. local CEST time).

The storied circuit south of the city with its 150,000 inhabitants consists mainly of public roads. Normally, hundreds of trucks and cars drive over the legendary Mulsanne Straight every day on their way from Le Mans to Tours. The fast Porsche curves are both famous and notorious. High speeds and narrow run-off zones pose special challenges and ensure spectacular race action on than section named for the German marque. The unique racetrack in the Sarthe region of France is only open to the teams to go testing once a season. This took place last Sunday.

The first running of the race was in 1923 to showcase automotive innovation, durability and performance. The only time the classic was not contested was in 1936 due to a general strike in France as well as during WWII and the reconstruction between 1940 and 1948.

Live streaming of the race

The official apps of the FIA WEC and the Le Mans organizer ACO offer a paid live stream and live timing from the 24 Hours of Le Mans. The full TV distribution list is available at fiawec.com. North American coverage can be found on Motor Trend TV and on the MAX streaming app.

In addition to the prospect of securing its 20th outright victory at Le Mans, Porsche celebrates a special anniversary: 50 Years of the Porsche Turbo. The turbocharged engines were developed in motorsport from 1971 and migrated into the road-going 911 just three years later. In 2024, the Porsche 963 hybrid prototype will also be powered by a bi-turbo engine. A classic example of the motorsport commitments from Stuttgart: Porsche advances innovations on the racetrack, subjects them to the toughest tests in fierce competition before they successfully flow into series production shortly afterwards.

Drivers' comments ahead of the race

Mathieu Jaminet, Driver, No. 4 Porsche Penske Motorsport Porsche 963:
"The 24 Hours of Le Mans is without a doubt the most important race of the year. I'm not the only one who thinks this, all drivers feel the same. As a Frenchman, this is particularly true. Even on the test day, we local heroes noticed the special attention. It's great to feel like stars for a week! After the race, however, it's back to normal life very quickly."

Michael Christensen, Driver, No. 5 Porsche Penske Motorsport Porsche 963:
"It's always incredibly difficult to gauge your chances before the start of the race. Nobody knows how the competition will stack up. We've already achieved some excellent results in this year's FIA WEC and the IMSA series. The car's great, the team is in top form and the drivers are fighting fit. Everything's ready. We'll do our best to be in the lead at the flag."

Kévin Estre, Driver, No. 6 Porsche Penske Motorsport Porsche 963:
"Judging from the way the WEC season has panned out so far, we're heading into the highlight event with high expectations and great anticipation. As a first step, we want to perfect the setup then qualify well and advance into the Hyperpole. It's the only time I'm competing at home in France and it's the biggest event. It'll be a memorable experience to drive in front of so many spectators again. I can hardly wait to get going on Saturday at 4 pm."

Will Stevens, Driver, No. 12 Hertz Team Jota Porsche 963:
"It's wonderful to be driving in Le Mans again. Our team has already achieved big successes on this racetrack in the LMP2 class. We're very familiar with this race and its special features. We've learned a lot from the races so far this season and now we're keen to implement this knowledge to the best of our ability and prepare ourselves perfectly for the big Le Mans challenge."

Jenson Button, Driver, No. 38 Hertz Team Jota Porsche 963:
"I've contested Le Mans twice so far and this year I'm racing for a team with extremely high ambitions. I really like that. At the WEC race in Spa, we showed that we're able to run at the front if everything goes right. That gave us a great deal of confidence. If we draw on all our experience, then there's no doubt we have every opportunity to achieve something really big."

Neel Jani, Driver, No. 99 Proton Competition Porsche 963:
"We believe we have a good chance. It's not that we're dreaming of an overall win, but we might be good for a podium spot. That's our goal. We still have some work to do on the setup and we still need to figure out our race strategy. We'll implement all the insights we've gained over the past weeks and months to be as well prepared as possible in time for the start."

Morris Schuring, Driver, No. 91 Manthey EMA Porsche 911 GT3 R:
"This is my first Le Mans race. It's quite funny looking at the numbers among our crew: My teammate Richard Lietz is competing for the 18th time and I'm only 19 years old. I'm the young rookie. I'm incredibly proud to be part of this team. We're ready. If we do everything right, we'll achieve something great – it'll be a result that will make the Porsche family proud."

Klaus Bachler, Driver, No. 92 Manthey PureRxcing Porsche 911 GT3 R:
"Given that the Le Mans circuit is not a dedicated racetrack, we expect the grip conditions to change a lot during the week compared to other tracks. We have the best team behind us! The goal is to win our class. We've spent months preparing for this challenge and we'll do our utmost to make our big dream come true."

Porsche's unparalleled track record at Le Mans

In 1951, Porsche sent a delegation to the 24-hour race in Le Mans for the first time. than year met with immediate success as two Frenchmen, Auguste Veuillet and Edmond Mouche, promptly clinched class victory at the wheel of the Porsche 365/4 SL Coupé. Since then, the Porsche brand has been represented on the grid of the world's greatest endurance race every year. To date, a total of 855 Porsche racing cars have contested the classic. Thanks to 19 overall victories and 110 class wins so far, the German sports car manufacturer is by far the number one on the list of achievements of the organizer Automobile Club de l'Ouest (ACO).
