

Porsche focuses on defending its IMSA titles in Indianapolis

17/09/2025 At the penultimate round of this year's IMSA WeatherTech SportsCar Championship, Porsche Penske Motorsport focuses on one key season objective: the fight for the manufacturers', teams' and drivers' titles. Next Sunday (21 September), the factory outfit will campaign two Porsche 963 race cars at the "Battle on the Bricks" on the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

With the iconic venue owned by the Penske Entertainment Group, the six-hour event in Indiana represents a home race of the North American squad. In the closing two races of the season, customer team JDC-Miller MotorSports puts its trust in the Swiss factory driver Nico Müller. In the GTD Pro class, AO Racing has the podium firmly in its sights with its 911 GT3 R, affectionately known as "Rexy".

Preview

The outlook for Porsche's factory contingent ahead of the six-hour race in Indianapolis looks promising: the sports car brand currently leads the manufacturers' standings, while Porsche Penske Motorsport and the driver crews of the No. 6 and No. 7 Porsche 963 entries rank first in the team and drivers' championships. The squad returns to the "Brickyard" with fond memories: in 2023 the team celebrated a one-two victory on the former Formula 1 circuit. Alongside the long-distance races at Daytona, Sebring and Watkins Glen as well as Petit Le Mans at Road Atlanta, the penultimate round of the North American IMSA series counts towards the Michelin Endurance Cup. If results go their way in Indianapolis, Porsche could clinch this special title and retain its championship crown.

"Building on our WEC season win in Austin, we're determined to return to our winning ways in the IMSA championship," emphasises Thomas Laudenbach, Vice President Porsche Motorsport. "Our team and drivers have consistently made the most of the conditions from each race, but unfortunately a win has eluded us. At our Penske home race in Indianapolis, we hope to see the Porsche 963 back at the front. We know our hybrid prototype and this legendary circuit complement each other perfectly, which is why we aim to take another step towards defending the title this weekend."

"Our victories in Daytona and Sebring, as well as the strong recovery at Watkins Glen, clearly show that the major endurance races suit us particularly well," explains Urs Kuratle, Director Factory Motorsport LMDh. "We're hoping for a level playing field in Indianapolis. If we can compete with our rivals on equal performance terms, then strategy, pit work and driver skill will be decisive. In all these disciplines, we are well positioned. I'm really looking forward to the home race of our factory team and to seeing our driver Nico Müller back at the wheel of the Porsche 963 for JDC-Miller MotorSports."

"We have proven that both of our crews are worthy of winning the championship. The task now is to ensure that they're given the tools to take the crown," states Jonathan Diuguid, Managing Director Porsche Penske Motorsport. "The team has been outstanding all year, making intelligent strategy calls, executing perfect pitstops and never giving up through tough on-track battles. We now need to once again maximise the performance potential of our Porsche 963 and take full points at Indianapolis before heading to the finale at Petit Le Mans."

In the No. 6 Porsche 963, former Porsche Juniors Matt Campbell (Australia) and Mathieu Jaminet (France) share driving duties. The duo currently leads the drivers' championship, holding a 75-point advantage over teammates Felipe Nasr (Brazil) and Nick Tandy (UK) in the No. 7 sister car.

Nico Müller builds further experience in the Porsche 963

At the upcoming "Battle on the Bricks" in Indianapolis, factory driver Nico Müller returns to the cockpit of the Porsche 963. The Swiss racer shares the hybrid prototype of customer team JDC-Miller MotorSports with Dutchman Tijmen van der Helm. Müller, who raced in Formula E for Porsche's partner team Andretti last season, has already gathered experience in the 963 this year: he contested the WEC round at Spa-Francorchamps with Porsche Penske Motorsport, and made his IMSA GTP debut at the 12 Hours of Sebring with JDC-Miller MotorSports. He also served as reserve driver for the factory team at the 24 Hours of Le Mans in June.

“Rexy” returns to the scene of a major victory

In the GTD Pro class, AO Racing continues its championship campaign with the Porsche 911 GT3 R. Former Porsche Juniors Laurin Heinrich (Germany) and Klaus Bachler (Austria) share the wheel of the dinosaur-liveried 911, affectionately dubbed “Rexy”. The pair currently lies third in the drivers’ standings. AO Racing triumphed at Indianapolis last year. In the GTD category, customer outfit Wright Motorsports also fields a Porsche 911 GT3. In the No. 120 cockpit, Americans Adam Adelson and Elliott Skeer join forces with Australian Tom Sargent.

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway in the US state of Indiana is one of the world’s oldest permanent racetracks. The facility – nicknamed the “Brickyard” due to the brick-paved start-finish line – was built in 1909 as a four-kilometre (2.5-mile) oval track. The famous Indy 500 is contested every year in the arena, which can seat almost 260,000 spectators and is the highlight of every IndyCar season.

For the IMSA WeatherTech SportsCar Championship’s six-hour “Battle on the Bricks”, the series uses the 3.925 km Grand Prix Road Course. This combination of long straights, high-speed oval sections and tight infield features 14 turns. From 2000 to 2007, Formula 1 also raced on a similar layout. The Indianapolis Motor Speedway has been owned by the Penske Entertainment Group since 2020 and is therefore part of Roger Penske’s corporate empire.

Live stream of the race

Outside the USA and Canada, the race will be broadcast live over the full distance in a free stream on imsa.tv. The website scoring.imsa.com offers live timing. The lights for the penultimate race of the IMSA WeatherTech SportsCar Championship season will go green on Sunday, 21 September, at 11:40 hours local time (17:40 hours CEST).

Drivers’ comments ahead of the race

Matt Campbell (Porsche 911 GT3 R #6): “The IMSA season wraps up with two major endurance races. We have consistently performed well in Indianapolis since 2023, and the track suits us perfectly. I hope we can finish the race without issues. Our focus is on defending the championship lead and ideally extending our advantage before we head to the season finale at Road Atlanta. We’re looking at the bigger picture and will avoid taking any unnecessary risks.”

Felipe Nasr (Porsche 963 #7): “I’m looking forward to being back in the Porsche 963 for the ‘Battle on the Bricks’. Indianapolis is such a unique track and always guarantees plenty of action throughout the field. The most important thing is to have a solid week with the #7 crew and keep our championship fight alive. We've had two tough results, which we're putting behind us, and we're eager to get back on top."

Nico Müller (Porsche 963 #85): "During my stint with JDC-Miller MotorSports at Sebring, we delivered strong performances throughout parts of the race. I now aim to build on that momentum. Hopefully, together we can make further progress and achieve strong results at Indianapolis this weekend and in October at Road Atlanta. I'm really looking forward to both upcoming endurance races."

Klaus Bachler (Porsche 911 GT3 R #77):"In 2023, I took pole position in our class at Indianapolis, and last year AO Racing claimed victory there. I'm feeling confident about the upcoming race. In recent rounds with our 'Rexy', we've done a solid job, but we haven't been able to challenge for class wins. Our goal is to get back to the top. The track is fantastic – a lot can happen over six hours."

Elliott Skeer (Porsche 911 GT3 R #120): "Every time Adam and I have raced at Indy; it's been an emotional roller coaster. Going into this one has that feeling of 'let's see which way it swings this time!'. It's been a rough summer with our team extracting the maximum of our car, but we couldn't match the other teams. Hopefully that can change here at the 'Battle of the Bricks', and we can rewind the tape to 2024."
