18/05/2017 From his schoolwork and apprenticeship to training and league games, everything in the life of Dominic Albrecht revolves around ice hockey and automobiles. The 19-year-old is receiving support from the Porsche Junior Programme “Turbo for Talents”.

Whether it’s work or sport, Dominic Albrecht’s life motto is “always give 100 per cent”. As both a second-year apprentice at Porsche and a forward for the Bietigheim-Bissingen Steelers, a partner club of the sports car manufacturer, the 19-year-old is a single-minded individual. Dominic believes one of the main reasons he is able to pursue his apprenticeship while still keeping up the intensive ice hockey training is the “Turbo for Talents” programme.

The Porsche training programme supports the sustainable development of children and young people in work and sport – with Dominic benefitting in both areas. And his efforts are paying off: At the “Porsche Nacht der Talente” (Night of Talent) 2016, this ambitious youngster received the Turbo for the “best academic achievement”. The Porsche Newsroom gives an insight into Dominic’s everyday life.
