Pascal Wehrlein – Porsche works driver

What he also learned is that there aren't that many racing drivers yet with a lot of Formula E experience which is why he came to the fore when Porsche was looking for a new team-mate for seasoned driver André Lotterer. Why he came into consideration? "I'm not an old hand yet," he supposed, "but I'm no longer a rookie either." And he also looks back on a successful career outside of Formula E. He won the ADAC Formula Masters in 2011, the following year he only just missed out on the title in the Formula 3 European series, finishing in second place. He also caused a stir after his rise to the German Touring Car Masters, where he became the youngest ever DTM champion at the tender racing driver age of 20. That triumph was his ticket to Formula 1. He was part of the Grand Prix circus for two years, representing Manor in 2016 and Sauber in 2017.

Ahead of the 2018/2019 season he moved to Formula E. For someone like him, for whom fun and equal opportunities are of top priority in his sport, it was the perfect choice. The highlight of his season was second place in Santiago de Chile. He has been driving for the TAG Heuer Porsche Formula E Team since Season 7. His first podium finish came in only his fourth race, at the Rome E-Prix. Wehrlein lines up for Porsche in Formula E again in Season 8.
