Porsche Classic Centre opened

Preserving the value of Old Timers and Young Timers is a goal Porsche has been successfully pursuing for years. Now, the second centre worldwide for Porsche Classics has just been opened in the French city of Rouen.

Porsche is continuing to expand its worldwide network of Porsche Classic Partners and Porsche Classic Centres in partnership with investors: Following the successful launch of the first Porsche Classic Centre in Gelderland (the Netherlands) last year, the second centre has now opened in celebratory fashion in Rouen (France). Porsche customers and Porsche enthusiasts alike can find the full range of services from Porsche Classic waiting for them at these centres. This concept sees the sportscar manufacturer integrate the maintenance and value retention of modern and older classic cars into a single innovative service concept, which closely interlinks tradition and innovation. With the newly opened centre in France, there is now a total of 44 Porsche Classic Partners worldwide – two of which are Porsche Classic Centres – across 17 countries ready to welcome car enthusiasts. The success of the centres proves that the concept works.

Worldwide network of Porsche Classic Partners

More than 70 per cent of all Porsche vehicles ever made are still on the road today. For Porsche, this alone was reason to ensure that classic car owners could access the excellent maintenance and restoration services their vehicles deserve. For Ingo Frenkel, Vice President Customer Center at Porsche, there is more to the sales concept than mere emotional attachment: "The retention of classic and modern vehicles from our brand is one of the very best examples of true sustainability. The permanent availability of spare parts and retention of the skills needed to repair and restore these vehicles are important facets of value retention". Porsche Classic Partners and Porsche Classic Centres, which are responsible for looking after our classic sportscars as well as the latest vehicles, have received special certification and training. "Selecting partners is a complex process", continues Frenkel. Professional qualifications are not the only important factor in this work – enthusiasm and identification with the brand and its history are also taken into account. In addition to the full Porsche Classic service package, partners offer a comprehensive range of original replacement parts and competent advice on classic vehicles and their purchase and sale.

Porsche Classic Centre: Newly opened location in Rouen, France

Around a year after the world's first Porsche Classic Centre opened its doors on November 26, 2015, a second centre has now opened in Rouen, France. On a 1900-square metre site, the centre gives customers and visitors access to an exhibition space and a large workshop, designed especially for classic vehicles. The 600-square metre workshop is equipped with the latest technology and allows repair work to be undertaken using state-of-the-art technology. A Porsche 911 Targa from 1972, and a 993 GT2 – both of which have been entered into the French Restoration Competition in recent years – are particular highlights of the 300-square metre exhibition space. The centre is staffed by a team of five employees who have been specially trained and are qualified in the repair and restoration of classic vehicles and to provide advice on all things related to classic cars.

Porsche Classic Centre: Extension in Gelderland, the Netherlands

Just a year after the first Porsche Classic Centre opened in Gelderland in the Netherlands, the centre is already nearing the limits of its capacity. "Right from the start, I knew that the concept of establishing a Porsche Centre specifically for classic vehicles would be a success. But the scale of our success has surprised us all – the originally planned size of 5380 square metres is no longer enough, so we are now extending the centre to 6970 square metres", says Marc Wegh, Managing Director and Owner of the Porsche Classic Centre in Gelderland. The Porsche Classic Centre in Gelderland is well-established: In its first year, it repaired and restored around ten vehicles for its customers, with a 1964 Porsche 911 being a particular highlight.
